What We Teach:

A nutritional based program for the prevention and treatment of caries, gingivitis and periodontal disease.

A full body approach to occlusion, neuromuscular, TMD and orofacial pain, stress and dysfunction.

A functional medicine laboratory-based approach to full body nutritional assessment.

Our scientific foundation:

A dental protocol built on the foundations of traditional dentistry

A nutritional protocol based on scientific research and biological medicine, backed by years of clinical observations

Our Unique Approach to Teaching:

The “School of Thought” concept: As opposed to standard seminars, Ours is a series of interconnected courses, each building upon the foundation of the previous level.

Our Traditional Foundation- classes are presented in 16 modules designed to give you a comprehensive understanding of how these subjects have nutritional and systemic application

Our Teaching Method

All modules are divided into three sections:

1-Didactic with scientific references

2-Application :Cookbook protocols with material resources

3-Intergration; Cookbook protocols for doctors and staff to implement the material into your practice

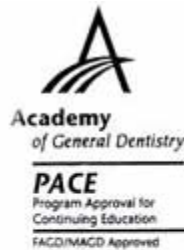

How We Teach:

Our “Peer Program”-Each student is assigned a fellow student with whom they work with for the entire course. This “buddy system” enables you to give each other help learning practical applications of the courses. Part of the school's function is to build a network of graduates helping each other and sharing the unique talents that each individual brings to the Institute.. As a continuation of this concept we have developed-

The Mentor Program- Each student is assigned a mentor who, outside of your classmates will also assist before, during and after classes. We note with great pride that over 30% of Institute Graduates become mentors.

“Mentorship” Graduates who have taken the course three times are presented with mentorship status which allows them to mentor students and make formal presentations
